ROUND HILL PRESBYTERIAN CEMETERY, ALLEGHENY COUNTY, PA., WHERE EARLY JOHNSONS AND WARNES ARE BURIED

The purpose of the enclosed supplemental sheets to JOHNSON RECORDS by Helen C. Biedel is to make additions and corrections to the first edition, 1955. It is suggested that these sheets be stitched or taped where they belong in your book according to page numbers. In all cases, you will find a blank page to which the new sheet can be stitched or taped.

Ours is a large and growing family and without the complete cooperation of all members of the family no record can be complete--or even correct. Yet, some folks do not answer their mail even when special inquiries are sent to them. The compiler has tried hard to authenticate data and she is very grateful to those whose continuing interest has lightened her labors and given encouragement.

There is still research to do--and additions to be made--but with JOHNSON RECORDS in hand, generations to come can work swiftly and surely. There are many accomplished and talented individuals in our family; their contributions to our age have been great. It is hoped that some day little biographies of these fine people can be published in more supplemental sheets. You can help make this a reality by sending in biographical--or autobiographical--material, including pictures, when possible.

"There is a Moral and Philosophical Respect for our Ancestors, which elevates the character and improves the heart."

Daniel Webster

P.S. Are there still members of your family who do not have copies of JOHNSON RECORDS? There are only a few left.

P.S. AND, please, remember to send in your family news, so that the master copy can be kept up-to-date.

OPEN LETTER TO RELATIVES

Greetings,

Do any of you know any magic words by which you can make Time stand still? If so, please, box them up and mail them to me for future use. Without such help, I have found it impossible to keep my notes and files up-to-date. Gathering family data requires time--and during that time individuals marry, babies are born, and others pass from this life--and I have family tables that are not as complete as they should be. To re-do all such pages is not practical. Of necessity, I have done the mimeographing piecemeal and that fact has added to the condition.

To illustrate the point I've just made, on page 49 we find the family of Sarah Beckett Johnson Hutton. Her children are numbered, which practice I used only in cases where the authority seemed indisputable or data came within my personal knowledge. Yet, when I checked the 1850 Census of Allegheny County, Pa., I found that Eliza was the oldest child in the family. Then, too, by the census figures the marriage date of Sarah and Charles could be determined within reasonable limits. Check the Addendum for this and other late data.

In looking at a group picture, regardless of the number in the picture the individual looks for himself first. So, it will be with JOHNSON RECORDS; each family will look for his own first. There you will find omissions and, probably, mistakes. While they are fresh in your mind, won't you list them and send them to me? Then, I can correct my files and add to the known data concerning your family.

Let no one think that JOHNSON RECORDS, or any other such published work, is the final word. Compilations of living generations must continue; research on earlier generations is limitless except as limits are imposed by time and money. This very limited edition is made to get known material out of my files and into your hands. I expect to continue the research and shall from time to time mail out sheets of new material, so that you may include it, perhaps, by copying it onto the blank sheets I have given you for that purpose. In my DAVIS RECORDS, I did not do this and my master copy is running over with marginal and loose notes.

My sincere thanks to the many who answered my queries or otherwise showed interest in the work. We really started from scratch and every bit of data sent was appreciated. Some of you were so thorough, too, in working out your family lines. If you weren't then, you may wish now to complete them for your and my future use. The next time you visit the graves of your older relatives copy the tombstone inscriptions, fully and carefully; then send me a copy.

I am glad to give you a proved Revolutionary ancestor in the person of Joseph Warne. On page 58, you will find a complete line of descent, into which it will be easy for you to fit yourself at the proper generation. Other Revolutionary ancestors will be proved later, I feel sure. Sutton records will be added to from time to time and Clark records will be in shape to include before too long, I hope. If I receive the magic words I've asked for---and while you're giving me that, throw in a railroad pass, too, please--- I'll promise results.

Very sincerely yours,

Helen C. Biedel

GENEALOGIST -- FOR THE LOVE OF IT

by

Helen C. Biedel

There are just two classes of persons interested in genealogy, fortune hunters and crack-pots --I've been told from Maine to Oregon. In fact, it seems to be a common classification among persons not interested in lineage. Certainly, it is held by many keepers of records in church and civil offices. Perhaps, the time has come to analyze the truth of the statement and to introduce a third class interested in genealogy, the genealogist for the love of it.

Of course, there are fortune hunters. Who can blame them if they try to establish lineage that they may inherit unclaimed fortunes. The family name may be Jones or Smith, the given name John or Mary; but, while there is life, there is hope. Some of these expect free service from a genealogist or an employee of a county office in chasing down their lineage; others pay well to have their work done.

True, there are people who earn their living tracing ancestral lines for one reason or another. They are specially trained individuals who possess, along with their part-lawyer, part-librarian education, an infinite amount of patience. Oftentimes, they search for days and weeks among dusty books filled with almost illegible writing in fading ink for one bit of information. Genealogists are not numbered among those workers who lock their desks and forget everything pertaining to it until the next work day. Oh, no. The genealogist may have her most brilliant flash of insight as she walks the busy street or awakens in the middle of the night. The Chinese puzzle of names and dates she has been noting in her mind and files suddenly takes form and fits into a pattern. This pattern is as essential to her work as words are to the poet or line to the artist. The genealogist recognizes patterns within families, of names, of marriages, and of deaths. We do not marvel at thirteen Dudleys in one family (the first Dudley must have been a lovable or an important individual), but when over a period of five generations, an average of only two out of seven in a family marry and have offspring, we question the continuance of the family name.

Non-professional genealogists are those whose deep interest in research leads them naturally into genealogical work either for themselves or as officers in organizations interested in lineage. They give generously of their time; they pay train fare and hotel bills to authenticate data. To do this may mean wearing the same coat year after year or doing without a new desk -- but small matter. The next generation, standing on their shoulders, will see farther and make a greater contribution to the future. The difficulties encountered are many, but none so wearing as the ignorances and obstinancies of some keepers of records, who intend to stay comfortable come hell or high water, or genealogists.

Recently, in the Register of Wills in a large county, I offered the courtesy of introducing myself and of asking permission to be in and about the department for the day. Bristling with disfavor and boredom, the official at the desk scolded, "Lady, you go on back home. You can't understand our code. There isn't anyone here to get you books and, anyway, it's too damn hot."

I could have told him that an unbreakable code is not suitable for the filing of public records, that I always lift down and replace, even by way of wobbly stepladders, all the books I use, and I was hot, too. A kinder employee in the same office told me the balcony held the earliest records of the county; I discovered the indexes for myself. The code proved no obstacle. I bothered no one with further questions, but happily worked on the balcony, which turned out to be a very special place to work since no one else came there that day. Perhaps, it was too hot.

The next morning, after I had climbed many stairs to his office the keeper of the historical records of a fine old church told me, "You won't find anything in my records. If you did, it wouldn't do you any good." A little later and a block away, another church official informed me that his records were valuable, private, and inaccessible to all except church employees. Even though I recognized a stone wall when I saw it, I did express a hope that local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other interested organizations might be permitted to copy or photostat these precious records and to place their copies in libraries and historical societies, where persons interested in them could use them without harm to the originals.

Unpleasant interludes are but shadows across the long paths of the genealogical researcher. She looks forward to other hours in libraries and museums, historical societies, and book rooms where quiet alcoves filled with beautifully-catalogued material await her. There men and women endlessly work to preserve records of our beginnings as founders of a free nation. She knows that while she will find tragedy among the faded pages, she also will find humor. Not long ago, in a minister's handbook, I read the careful notation, "On the 13th day of May in the year of our Lord 1835 I united in marriage two persons of colour." No names. Among county records, I found scrawled in a bold hand across the partly-filled-in marriage application the words, "She changed Her mind." A few pages on, and almost as an afterthought, someone had written in neat script at the bottom of another application to marry, "The deacon is 91, she's 19--his third."

The interested individual sees in the fading statistical data the life stories of families, in which, generation after generation, children have been born and reared to become lawmakers of our great nation, citizens of the world, and parents of future generations. From these stories much interesting and unusual family lore needs to be lifted out to add its color to our store of historical anecdotes. In the meantime, some of us, who neither seek our fortunes at the foot of the genealogical rainbow nor confess to a cracked mental state, enthusiastically and patiently will go our quiet way, exploring musty files and weedy cemeteries, copying Bible records, and thankfully adding bit by bit to that field of knowledge called genealogy-- just for the love of it.

DORCAS JOHNSON b. 4-24-1840; d. 1934 -- 10th child of Joseph and Catharine McKee Johnson

Excerpts from letters written by Dorcas Johnson to her grand-nephew, Frank G. Nelson:

May 10, 1931 Sunday -- "As it is Mother's Day I thought it appropriate to write a sketch of her life as I have heard her tell it, and a little of Father's life. In 1812 the war broke out. Father, young and full of vigor, thought he would go. He was tall, dark hair and blue eyes. So he got ready, packed his knapsack or saddlebags, throwed it across the horse and pistols in the holsters, mounted the horse and rode away. When the war was over he came home.

He was not satisfied, thought there was something else to do, so he started to look for a farm. He lived in Pennsylvania. So he came to Ohio. He looked for a farm that was well watered. It was all in woods and underbrush, - tall and stately trees, poplar, oak, hickory, walnut, elm, ash, wild cherry, beech, sugar trees, and a great many other trees. You would like to know what I mean by underbrush, it is what grows under the trees, -sassafras, spice wood, wild holly bushes with red holly on them, wild crab apples, wild plums Sarves (service?) berrys, and a great many things too numerous to mention. There was Indians and wild animals - panthers.

My father bought this farm with the money he got in the war. 2½ an acre, 200 acres, - a large quarter. And then he commenced clearing it out. Cleared enough to build him a one-room cabin. Round logs, puncheon floor, stone chimney-place, four windows. At night he would hang something in the windows to break the wind. Then he commenced clearing a garden and a truck patch.

He begun to feel lonesome there in the woods, thought he would get someone to live with him. He had known Mother in Pennsylvania, so he thought she would make him a good companion. Her sister had got married and came to Ohio to live, but lived some distance and my mother had come to stay a while with her. When father's week's work was over he would go to my aunt's and stay over Sunday. Mother's sister thought a great deal of Father and she encouraged and done all she could so they got married and went on the farm. Lived happy together. Cleared the farm."

Notes taken down from Aunt Dorcas' dictation by F. Nelson, summer, 1931 -- When they first went to housekeeping they made their own furniture. The nearest place was Zanesville, about twenty miles away. They made benches and stools first, and made their own table out of boards. Aunt Annie Shields, Mother's sister, gave her a cupboard, which is still at Leslie Alexander's in Ohio. I don't know what kind of bedsteads they had - I guess with cords put in. The underticks was homemade linen, -straw ticks they was. Then the beds, they was high posts enough to have curtains round. The beds was in the living room, and to break the view they had curtains round that they could get in behind. The next chairs they got was split-bottom chairs, and then a big rocking chair.

It was a one-room log cabin. The chimney was built of stone that was got off the farm. There was different kinds of stone there. When they moved into the house the chimney was built up only part way. The windows was cut out, but no windows put in. They hung things in the windows.

In the fireplace they fixed a pole to hang things to cook. They had an iron oven for to bake bread and pies in and pans that they'd cook fruit in. They'd set them out on the hearth and heap coals and ashes up. The table-cloths was home-made linen. Mother spun the thread and got them wove. She didn't weave them herself but got them woven.

After a while they made an out-oven for baking, big enough to bake about twelve loaves of bread. Having no pans to bake bread, they laid the loaves on cabbage leaves. They baked pies in old plates. Mother made their own wear. She spun linen from flax,- linen summer, wool winter. They fulled the cloth by laying it on the floor, spreading suds on it, and kicking it. They had "kicking parties". She made red flannel wamuses for winter wear. She spun the flax and tow on the little wheel and wool on the big wheel.

They lived in the log house until they had cleared out part of the land. They built close to a spring. After they had cleared out more, a part Indian moved onto the farm and helped clear the land. They rolled the logs together and burned them. Mother helped in this.

The next house was a hewed log house. It had one room downstairs and one upstairs. The chimney was brick, with jambs and mantle of sandstone. This house had a board floor. Then, they had what was called an entry, and a kitchen next to that on the other side. They cooked and ate in the kitchen.

Then, they began to get little things gathered together. They got a little better chairs, a table, and different. The table was walnut. Then the one that built the log house made a cupboard to fit in beside the chimney--it was all walnut with glass doors. The stairs went up on the other side of the chimney."

Dorcas' manuscript again -- "The next house was a frame two-story, a large house and a big yard and flowers. My mother was a lover of flowers and she would be out early with her flowers; if she would see a new flower, she would get it. Our neighbors would come to see her flowers, they would say it looked like Paradise. She worked with her flowers as long as she was able and then she throwed it up to me. I have a few of her flowers that she had in her yard, of which I prize very much. My Father and Mother lived happy together until he was up higher.

They raised a big family, seven boys and six girls. The second boy was called home, and then a little girl and another--Ephrem--which almost broke my mother's heart, for she built so much on him. It was as if the loss was too much. It was hard on Mother, but she bore up under it all. She would be out among her flowers, when she would get tired she would come in to rest--and pick up her Bible. It was always laid on the stand. She would read until she would go to sleep. She never laid down.

And then the next was Father. He went very sudden. He was out looking over the farm, he said he was all over it. He ate his dinner. After dinner he went to wind shoe-thread to mend some of the family's shoes. He complained he felt queer and told my sister to call Mother. She came right away. He laid on thd bed but could not lay so he got up and they helped him to the portico. He sat down on a chair. Mother was doing all she could. Us four girls were there. Our brother Thomas rode up. Some one told him to go for a doctor, but he was hardly out of sight when Father breathed his last. Mother said, "Father, I am afraid you are dieing". "Iexpect so", that was his last.

That was the 29th of October. We put in a sad winter. In about ___ weeks Fannie took down with typhoid fever. Twelve weeks we did not think she would live. The winter went by. It was a sad winter.

Then the war came. My brother Abram was out in the field plowing. He unhitched the horses from the plow and started to Zanesville to enlist, - told one of the neighbors to come and let us know he was the first to enlist in Meigs township. He went at the first call, came back, stayed a little while, and went again--stayed until the war was over. He was one to help to take the American flag when the rebels took it. They fought hand to hand fight. Then two of my other brothers (Allen and Hugh) went.

Thomas got married. That was another blow. Us girls tried to make it as pleasant for her as we could, we would be out in the cold and come in laughing."

Frank Nelson's note -- "Aunt Dorcas's manuscript skips over the Civil War years, but she often told about them. After Thomas's marriage her mother and the four girls were left to manage the farm by themselves. To make matters worse, their mother was an outspoken Democrat who felt that the war was a mistake and that the government ought to buy the Negroes from their owners in stead of killing white men to free them. As a result the five women endured a great deal of persecution from neighbors who used patriotism as an excuse to try to drive them off their farm. A good part of the time they lived in virtually a state of siege, locking themselves at night in one upstairs bedroom with a bureau against the door, axes ready to defend themselves if need be, and with a large dog in the room to protect them. Very often they heard men downstairs at night, but while they were sure who they were they could do nothing to bring them to justice".

Dorcas' manuscript -- "And the time went on. The boys got home, but was not home long until they got married and we was still alone. In a few years two girls of them got married. (Margaret and Martha) Still, Mother had two with her. (Fannie and Dorcas) One (Martha) moved to High Hill, her husband (Frank Schreiber) was in the store, lived there a few years and then moved in with us, where all of the children were born but John -- he was born in High Hill. Mother lived to see seven of them. She took sick in February, had pneumonia. She got able to be around the house, but never gained strength.

June 12 Abram and his son Joseph was killed by a cyclone (1881, in Missouri). When the word came we were afraid to tell her. The doctor said we would have to be careful not to excite her. She seen there was something and she asked, so when she was told she said it was God's works - what He sent we could bear; she said she could see light in Thy light. She said if we had not told her she would not have lived five minutes. She lived til November 29th. She was called home. We was left without Mother to battle our way through life. The minister that preached her funeral stayed all night and the prayer he made at night and morning, I wish I had it in print. It seemed to me it was the most fervent prayer I ever heard."

Another manuscript by Dorcas -- "On Sundays they (Father and Mother) would ride six miles to church in Chandlersville. Father had an even temper, was a great reader. When he started to read a book he would finish it. He never boasted or bragged, but was ready to answer all questions sensibly. Could entertain people. When asked anything about his war service he would say, "The ground was my bed, a log my pillow."

Mother always bore her share of the work during those pioneering years. She would gather roots, bark and leaves to dry to be used for medicine - such as pennyroyal, cat-nip, hoarhound, peppermint, rattle-root and ginseng. Doctors in those days were scarce and Mother seemed to know the kind of teas to make for her family when they got sick. Even the neighbors would send for her when any of their family got sick.

She would sew, too, for people. Some would pay and some would not. She made enough later on to buy some furniture. All of their first furniture was homemade.

When their oldest son was 1 year old, they decided to make a trip back to Pennsylvania. At that time they had only one horse, which Mother rode and carried the baby. Father walked along carrying a gun. They would stop places on the way to eat and sleep. When they arrived Mother was so stiff they had to lift her off the horse and carried her in the house. Grandfather gave Father a horse and he rode back home with Mother. I don't know how long it took them to make the trip. Mother was more contented to live in Ohio after she made this first trip back to her old home in Pennsylvania.

Excerpt from an old History of Davies County, Missouri:*

Enoch S. M. Donaldson, son of John H. Donaldson, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, Jan. 19, 1840. When Enoch was two years old his father moved to Morgan County, Ohio. He remained with his father until he was 22 years old, during which time he worked on the farm and attended school. He was engaged in farming until 1864, when he went to Venango County, Pa., where he worked for three years. During part of this time he was employed by an oil company, also part ofthe time he worked at the shoemaker's trade. He, also, learned to be a practical engineer and followed that trade for a while. In 1867, he went to Morgan County, Ohio, where he stayed a few months when he went to Caldwell County, Missouri, where he engaged in farming. In 1868 he married Charity E. McGarvin and moved to Davies County where he had purchased a farm. (This excerpt was sent to the compiler by a descendant who added "all of us children were born in Daviess County".)

John B. Johnson's will, recorded in Probate Court, Muskingum County, Ohio; made 12-20-1879; pr. 8-27-1881
Named: Ameset, Alice, Elizabeth, Mary J., Frances, Lutitia, John Gano, Sarah A. Clark, William, Allen L. Johnson.

Obituary of Sarah Johnson found in the Bible of Leutitia Careins, her daughter:
Sarah Johnson Born Jan. 7th-1816 in Elizabeth Township, Allegheny Co., Penn. Died Nov. 5th--1901. Aged 85 yrs. 9 mo. 28 da. Moved to Ohio in 1844. United in marriage to John B. Johnson Oct. 30, 1834. To this union eleven children were born, of which seven survive her. She has been a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church for 45 years.
Note: The Sutton family were Methodists; the Johnsons, Presbyterians. For years, Sarah's family attended two services each Sunday, one in each denomination and supported both houses of worship.

Story of Slave: On the first morning after the Johnson family arrived at their new home in High Hill, they discovered their slave whom they had left in Pennsylvania. He had followed the covered wagon on foot, had eaten from the wagon at night or gone hungry, and had kept his presence unknown. He had been left with members of the Johnson family in Pennsylvania; it was against the law to transport slaves into Ohio. "Grandpap" rebuked the old fellow and told him he should have stayed with his friends. The Negro replied that he wanted to live with his own folks. He and Grandmother dug a huge cistern that was used for many years; "Grandpap" had said there were more important things to do just then.

Grandmother Johnson was a hard-working, thrifty person. All loved her, young and old alike. Her heart was as big "as all outdoors and her door was never shut to anyone in trouble or need." Many letters confirm that fact. Two boys grew up in her home--John Davis and John McClain; others were sheltered for a while.

Grandmother and "Grandpap" Johnson are buried in Mt.Zion Cemetery, Rich Hill Township, Muskingum County, Ohio. The Negro who followed them to Ohio is buried on their lot. The compiler talked with persons who attended the burial. The Johnsons were criticised severely for burying a Negro on their own lot.

(When it was time for cider making in the Johnson orchard, the Zanesville newspaper carried the news item--in the social and not in the advertising column.)

Joseph Warne (the name is spelled Warner and even Werner in many old records) came with his family to Forward Township, Westmoreland County, Pa., in 1769. Forward Township became a part of Rostraver Township, which in 1788 became Elizabeth Township, Allegheny County, Pa. The Warnes came with the Millers, Allens, Pearces, and others to make up the "Jersey Settlement". In her widowhood Dorcas lived with her son, Stephen. Both Joseph and Dorcas Warne are buried in Round Hill Cemetery (Presbyterian), Elizabeth Township, Allegheny County, Pa. (2, p. 83 on, 4,5,6)

Division of Public Records
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

September 5, 1956

Dear Mrs. Biedel:

As we stated in the Supplement sent you with our letter of 29 August 1956, the Pennsylvania Archives contains certain regrettable inaccuracies. One of these is the inclusion of "Capt. Becketts Return" among the militia records for the County of Philadelphia. Actually it pertains to the Westmoreland County militia, specifically that of Rostraver Township, is the considered opinion of the archivists in this Division.

Sincerely,

(Signed) Henry Howard Eddy
State Records Officer

As given under "References", p. 58*, in Pa. Archives, 6th Ser., Vol. 2, p. 295, Captain Joseph Beckett is listed as captain with the 5th Bn., 1782, from Westmoreland County, Pa. The Pittsburgh S.A.R. Revolutionary Soldiers of Allegheny County, Pa. designates his grave in Round Hill Cemetery, Elizabeth Township, where Joseph Warne is buried. Pa. Archives 2nd Ser., Vol. 14, p. 696, also, lists Capt. Joseph Beckett of the Westmoreland County, Pa., militia.

SUTTON, WILLIAM -- 11th child of Jesse and Catharine Sutton

Sutton, William b. 1841 (1850 Census, Muskingum Co., Ohio) left community and probably Ohio in 1865, approximately, and was not heard of afterwards. William, Jesse, Jr., and Montilion were in the home of Sarah Sutton Johnson often and for long visits, according to Jane Bailey, High Hill, Ohio, interviewed by compiler many times before her death in High Hill.

The following are brief pertinent excerpts from the letters of Willis H. Sutton, Chandlersville, Ohio, to the compiler. Mr. Sutton's letters are gems. His keen wit and alert mind make them so. His tendency to overrate the compiler's ability deters her from copying whole letters into this record. He is the oldest living member of his generation.

1947--It gives me great pleasure to find one more link in the Family tree of the Suttons. This has been my Hobby for a number of years. I have been tracing this Hobby for a long time. . . My Grandfather's name was Jesse Sutton. His wife's name was Elizabeth (It was Catharine, as Mr. Sutton wrote later) They are buried in the old cemetery at Chandlersville . . . Yes, Helen, I surely remember Sarah Johnston. She was a Sister of my Father and a very nice couple Johnny and Sarah was. In my Boyhood days we made it a practice going to Uncle and Sarah Johnston's to gather Fall grapes--and what a treat for me. O time in your Flight Please make me a Boy for tonight. How wonderful.

My information is that William Sutton was a bachelor. . . He left this community about 1865 and was never heard from since. He was Brother of Sarah and Daniel Sutton.

1948-- (After listing his aunts and uncles, as well as members of his own family, he added) Catharine McNulty had no children.

1949--Was sorry to hear of the accident you had in Blue Rock Cemetery and the attack of Snakes and Jiggers. They are very pesticating. You had better take a vacation until these pests are frozen. I don't care to mix up with the varmints. (It was on this visit that Mr. Sutton told the compiler that his grandfather, Jesse Sutton, died in the home of Daniel, Willis Sutton's father.)

In 1949, Mrs. Edna J. Hutt, granddaughter of Elizabeth Sutton Holmes wrote, "In years gone by I have heard Mother (Margaret Holmes Uphold) speak of Willis Sutton; also, Aunt Sarah Johnson but of course they are just names to me. . . Dianna Simms and Kate McNulty were sisters of Grandmother Holmes. . ."
